As September begins, it is hard not to focus on what is going on in Washington. On the one hand, Senate confirmation hearings on Supreme Court nominee Brett Kavanaugh have begun, with Republicans trying to sprint through his nomination – one that will likely create an extreme right-wing majority on the court that could overturn Roe v Wade and Obamacare, roll back civil liberties, and further the trend of using state power to protect corporations rather than people. On the other hand, Bob Woodward has released a book documenting a dizzying level of dysfunction in the Trump administration, and revealing serious misgivings about President Trump's capacities even among members of his own administration. The confluence of these two events demonstrates the depth and gravity of the crisis our nation now finds itself in.

I obviously believe that Judge Kavanaugh's ideological extremism makes him unfit to sit on the Supreme Court, but in some ways the greater concern is that he will be in a position to shield the man who appointed him from due process of law. This is particularly worrisome given that Judge Kavanaugh stated as recently as 2016 that he wanted to "put the final nail" in the court decision that upheld the constitutionality of the independent counsel law. While the independent counsel law expired in 1999, the regulations governing Mueller's appointment as a special counsel, like the independent counsel law itself, prohibit Mueller from being fired without good cause.

The possibility of Supreme Court interference with the Mueller investigation into criminal behavior by the President and/or his associates would be devastating to the concept that no one is above the law. In confirmation hearings, Kavanaugh has also refused to comment about whether the president has the ability to pardon himself.

The revelations contained in Bob Woodward's new book Fear: Trump in the White House suggest these are hardly hypothetical issues. According to the book, Trump's own attorney told him not to testify before Mueller, saying, "it's either that or an orange jumpsuit." And the stories of the lengths aides would go to try to control Trump, such as removing letters from his desk before he could sign them, as well as their opinions of his intellectual capacity and mental stability, are breathtaking. I knew it was bad, but I didn't imagine it was this bad.

The Republicans have the numbers to confirm Kavanaugh without Democratic votes, but I can only hope that one or more of them will recognize their duty to the country is greater than their duty to Donald Trump. Regardless of what happens I also call on all Democratic Senators to oppose this nomination. We need a Justice who will not reverse existing court decisions in order to serve an elite ultra-conservative agenda. But even more importantly, we need a Justice who will stand for the concept that no one – including and especially the President – is above the law.

POLICY SPOTLIGHT

Economic Development Subsidies

One of the most basic principles of economic development subsidies is that they should only be granted in "but for" situations. That means that "but for" the subsidy, the project would not go forward. Sometimes it can be hard to tell. Unfortunately, New York State has a bad habit of spending money on cases that obviously don't meet this standard.

The current scandal around Crystal Run Healthcare is an example of this. In March 2016, the state awarded $25.4 million to Crystal Run to build two facilities the company was already constructing without taxpayer subsidies. This has become particularly newsworthy this election cycle because the key players in Crystal Run were major donors to Governor Cuomo, but this kind of generosity on the part of the state is all too common.

An analysis conducted last year by Timothy Bartik, a senior economist at the independent, nonpartisan W.E. Upjohn Institute for Employment Research, found that New York's incentives cost the state $8.25 billion in revenue in 2015, the highest level in the nation. This amount was a staggering 75.9% percent of gross business taxes, also the highest level in the nation. In other words, of all the taxes New York State collects from businesses, three quarters are given away directly to a select group of "winners" chosen by the state. This creates serious inequities between businesses, since those who are not getting subsidies (along with individual taxpayers) are effectively paying for these benefits through their taxes. A summary of the findings of the report is available on the Citizen's Budget Commission website at <https://cbcny.org/research/nys-economic-development-programs-costliest-nation>.

New York State's overreliance on economic development incentives is not new – in fact levels were even higher before modest reforms to one of the most expensive programs were instituted in 2008. Before those reforms were implemented I introduced the Corporate Accountability for Tax Expenditures Act (S3364-A) which I have continued to carry and refine over the years, and unfortunately revelations such as those surrounding Crystal Run highlight the continued need for reform.

My legislation would create a Unified Economic Development Budget to improve transparency. It would also require that State economic assistance provided by any state agency or public authority must be based on the terms of a standardized written incentive agreement, and provide that if a business fails to create or retain the specified number of jobs and breaks the contract, the business will no longer qualify for State economic assistance.

Economic development programs create great opportunities for ribbon cuttings, but they have offered false hope for addressing underlying economic issues. A much better model involves a fair tax structure that doesn't reward well connected businesses at the expense of other taxpayers, and the investments in infrastructure and human capital that create the conditions for a thriving workforce and a vibrant business climate for everyone.

COMMUNITY SPOTLIGHT

NY State of the Climate Event September 27th:

Senator Brad Hoylman and I are hosting a panel discussion on what New York State can do to fight climate change, on Thursday, September 27th, from 6:00 to 8:00 p.m. at the Marble Collegiate Church Loft, 276 Fifth Avenue at 29th Street.

With Washington abdicating its responsibility to join every other nation on Earth in the fight against climate change, it's more important than ever that New York take a leading role in the transition to a carbon-free future.

Join a panel of advocates for a discussion of where New York fits in the global context, and what state-level solutions should look like, with an emphasis on environmental justice and just transition for workers.

Panelists will include Payal Parekh, Global Programme Director of 350.org; Peggy Shepard, Co-Founder and Executive Director of WE ACT for Environmental Justice; Lara Skinner, Executive Director of the Worker Institute at Cornell University; and Alex Tindal Wiesendanger, Campaign Coordinator at NY Renews.

Space is limited. Please RSVP at <http://tinyurl.com/NYStateoftheClimate>.

Senator Krueger's 12th Annual Senior Resource Fair October 18th:

My 12th Annual Senior Resource Fair will take place on Thursday, October 18th from 2:00 to 5:00 pm at Temple Emanu-El, 1 East 65th Street. Last year's fair was attended by more than 500 people and this year we expect around 100 non-profit senior service providers and advocacy groups to participate and provide information about a range of issues including healthcare, housing, and volunteer opportunities. No RSVP necessary.

Get Rid of Your Harmful Household Products Safely:

On Sunday, September 23, from 10:00 AM to 4:00 PM in Union Square, North Plaza (south side of 17th St, between Park Ave South and Broadway), get rid of your harmful household products including solvents, automotive products, electronics, flammable waste, medical items and other household products safely. Cars can approach from Park Ave South and 20th St and there is a walk-in area available for residents taking public transportation. For more information, visit <https://www1.nyc.gov/assets/dsny/site/services/harmful-products/safe-disposal>.

New Website Offers Information on Challenging Ageism:

Anti-Ageism activist Ashton Applewhite and a group of advocates have created the website Old School, a clearinghouse of free and carefully vetted resources to educate people about ageism and help dismantle it. You'll find blogs, books, articles, videos, speakers, and other tools (workshops, handouts, curricula etc.) that are accessible to the general public. The goal is to help catalyze a movement to make ageism (discrimination on the basis of age) as unacceptable as any other kind of prejudice. You can access the site at <https://www.oldschool.info/>.

Clergy Abuse Hotline Established by Attorney General Underwood:

New York Attorney General Barbara D. Underwood has established a clergy abuse hotline and online complaint form through which victims and anyone can provide information – part of the Attorney General's ongoing investigation into sexual abuse of children within the New York dioceses of the Catholic Church.

Victims and anyone with information about abuse can call the hotline at 1-800-771-7755 or file a complaint online at ag.ny.gov/ClergyAbuse. An investigator will review all allegations; the Attorney General and her law enforcement partners will seek to protect victims' and witnesses' identities.

Volunteer Opportunity with the Court Navigator Program:

The Court Navigator Program trains college students and other volunteers to provide non-legal assistance to unrepresented litigants in New York City Housing Court, connecting them to all resources available to them in the courthouse and community to empower them to better advocate for themselves. Since its inception this program has proved to be an invaluable resource for unrepresented litigants in the Court's efforts to ensure access to justice to all court users.

A minimum of 30 volunteer hours are required to participate in the Court Navigator Program. Hours may be completed Monday to Friday from 9:15am to 1pm in Brooklyn, Queens, Manhattan and Bronx Housing Courts except for court holidays. Volunteers are encouraged to complete more than 30 volunteer hours.

The next training will take place on Tuesday, September 18th at 111 Centre Street, New York, NY 10013, Room 107 from 10:00 a.m to 1:00 p.m. with registration beginning at 9:30 a.m. Please use the court's entrance at White Street (between Lafayette St. and Centre St.)

An application is required. If you are interested in volunteering, please email a copy of your resume to courtnavigator@nycourts.gov.

Volunteer Opportunity for Retired Persons:

The Community Service Society's Advocacy Counseling and Entitlement Service (ACES) Project is recruiting retired individuals to help clients with public benefit applications and issues. There will be an information orientation held on this volunteer opportunity on Thursday, September 20th from 10:00 AM to 1:00 PM at the Community Service Society office (633 3rd Avenue, which is on 3rd Avenue between 40th and 41st Streets). The training for this opportunity would begin on October 2, and it will take place at 633 3rd Avenue (3rd Avenue between 40th and 41st Streets). Those who are interested can read the Community Service Society's volunteer description here: <http://cssny.org/pages/the-aces-project-volunteer-description>. For a full description of the ACES Project, visit <http://cssny.org/programs/entry/the-aces-project>.
